Buckeye Truck Terminals Message

To protect Buckeye Terminal Operators' and Carrier Truck Drivers' health and safety, Buckeye has implemented social distancing practices as recommended by government agencies.

- Only Buckeye Terminal Operators and Truck Drivers who are healthy and have no symptoms of the Coronavirus (COVID-19) should conduct business at the terminal. Stay home if you are sick.
- Buckeye Terminal Operators and Carrier Truck Drivers should attempt to maintain six (6) feet of distance when conducting activities at the terminal.
- All Vapor Tightness tests must be emailed in order to be updated. No hard copies will be accepted until further notice.

Due to the close personal interaction required that could spread the Coronavirus, Buckeye will be limiting its driver training and carding process for new truck drivers. Buckeye will only be training and carding new truck drivers in urgent, pre-approved situations. To obtain pre-approval, Carriers must send a written (email) request with a thorough explanation of the urgent need to train and card a new driver to the Terminal's Lead Terminal Operator, who will submit the request to Buckeye Management for review and response.

Buckeye will make best efforts to continue to card experienced drivers, following social distancing practices, as there is less close personal interaction required.

Buckeye holds the health and safety of its employees, its customers, and the communities we serve as a priority. Your assistance and support is very important in implementing social distancing and disrupting the transmission of the Coronavirus. Buckeye will inform its Carriers and Truck Drivers when conditions change.

Stay Safe and Healthy
